Read4Life

Adult summer reading

Kids who see adults reading are more likely to become readers. Set aside 15 minutes for Family Reading Time.

Visit our website or a Multnomah County library multcolib.org

Have someone read to you from a book, an article, or a magazine

Ask us a question in person, by phone 503.988.5123 or online at multcolib.org/contact

Listen to music or an audiobook

Watch a movie or video with the subtitles on

Reading is good for your brain! Set a timer and read without interruption for 15 minutes

Explore our Best Books of the year multcolib.org/best-books-23

Read a book from a new-to-you genre or topic

Chat with someone about books

Read with a child or read a young adult or children's book multcolib.org/children-book

Read a magazine, an article or a blog post

Share a favorite recipe with someone or explore cookbooks multcolib.org/cookbooks

Read a mystery set in another country multcolib.org/global-gumshoes

Read or write a poem. Doing both counts as two activities!

Read a book with characters who are neurodivergent or experience disabilities multcolib.org/neurodiverse

Ask someone to recommend a book or get a custom list from My Librarian multcolib.org/my-librarian

Get involved: volunteer or read a book about activism multcolib.org/get-involved

TO PLAY

- Starting June 16, mark each activity that you complete. Complete at least four activities. Starting July 15, present the completed form below at any Multnomah County library to claim your prize, while supplies last. Want a more challenging game? Play the online-only bonus game on Beanstack (multcolib.bean stack.org) and read for 50 days.

- If you don't want to use the game board, design your own! On a piece of paper, list four reading-based activities you completed this summer, provide your contact information, and return it to any Multnomah County library. You may participate in any language.

NOTES (optional)

Use this space to list the book titles and authors that you read this summer.
